Set around Laramie in 1870, "Murder for Greenhorns" is the story of schoolteacher Kate Shaw and cowboy Monday Malone who witness a murder while traveling to the town of Warbonnet on the Oregon Trail. The two conspire to uncover the killer.

Wyoming author Craig Johnson comments "There's no one I welcome into the folds of western/mystery more than Rob Kresge; his sense of history and drama hit me like the tang of well-oiled gun leather."

Rob Kresge lives in New Mexico. Originally from the east, Kresge worked with the CIA and discovered there that "history matters. Life is sculpted from the raw materials of people, place, and time acted upon by the forces of personality, culture, and ideas."
